

Market trends and ship finance methods

Course aim and objectives:

Shipping management is a dynamic but also volatile business since it is affected by current market trends and changes in the world economy. Shipping companies manage risks by modifying operations and adjusting their capital structure in different ways. This course provides participants with the essentials for understanding corporate business decisions and the risk related issues in conjunction with the various methods and sources of raising capital for shipping finance. This process gradually shifts traditional ship-management to corporate structured shipping for ensuring operating cash flow and fast returns.

Course main elements:

- Introduction to current market trends and methods of ship finance
- Understanding the financial health and needs of the company
- Raising capital by modifying operations and targeting new shipping sectors
- Moving from traditional to corporate ship-management
- Practical exercises

Course participation:

The course is open to shipping company top management, commercial and technical shipping operators

Course duration: 1 day
